Campbell County Undertaking "Talking Book" Program

The Campbell County Public Library is undertaking a program to acquaint handicapped persons in the surrounding areas with the free benefits of the Talking Books program. This is a federal program run by the Library of Congress in Washington, D. C. and in Virginia by the Virginia State Library for the Blind and Physically Handicapped. This latter organization circulates to state readers a large variety of special reading materials provided by the Library of Congress.

The Virginia State Library for the Blind and Physically Handicapped is currently extending this service to the local level through cooperating public libraries. Campbell County Public Library is now taking part in this program.

Types of materials that are available through the program are talking books, open reel tapes, cassette tapes, and large print books. The Campbell County Public Library is limiting the program to talking books and large print books because of limited available space.

Talking book machines, which are simply record players having special speeds are available for registered individuals free of charge. These players may be kept in a person's home as long as they are taking part in the program. Talking book records are checked out for one month and are postage free or may be returned to the bookmobile.

Types of talking books range from the Bible to 'In Cold Blood,' to Children's Stories.

An applicant with a permanent or temporary visual problem is eligible including persons who have to use large print books. Applicants with physicals handicaps are eligible if the disability (cerebral palsy, crippling arthritis, strokes) prevent handling print volumes or holding them steady enough to read.

Also, institution-hospitals, nursing homes, etc. are eligible.

The only requirement for being enrolled in the program is to be certified as having a handicap. Doctors, nurses, teachers, librarians, or welfare personnel can certify an individual.

At present, only 19 individuals in Campbell County are taking part in the program.

Eugene Fischer, librarian at Rustburg, feels that the number is caused by not being aware of the service available and by not knowing that the whole program and the record playing equipment and postage for the records is completely free. Fischer says any person who has a physical handicap or someone who knows of such a person to contact the public library at Rustburg.

Homemaker Hints

By Rebecca M. Johnson, Extension Agent

Deadline for signing up for the Consumer Education Tour to the Williamsburg area is May 15. Members receive priority, but guests are welcome if room permits. The cost is $6.75.

Family Life leaders received many good ideas at the leader training meeting at Southside Electric Coop last week. The program was on "New Breakfast Ideas", and many new recipes were shown, including one for Breakfast Cookies which would appeal to the picky child. Leaders will receive recipe sheets for each club member.

For readers who aren't Extension Homemakers, the recipe for Breakfast Cookies is below.

Breakfast Cookies

1/2 Pound Bacon
1/2 Cup butter or margarine
3/4 Cup Sugar
1 Egg
1 Cup of all purpose flour
1/4 teaspoon baking soda
2 Cups cornflakes
1/2 Cup Raisins

Cook bacon until very crisp; drain well, break into half-inch pieces and reserve. Cream together butter and sugar until fluffy; beat in egg. Combine flour and soda, stir into butter mixture. Stir in bacon pieces, cornflakes and raisins. Drop rounded tablespoons of the dough two inches apart onto ungreased baking sheets. Bake at 350 degrees for 15 to 18 minutes. Cool one minute. Remove from baking sheets and cool completely on wire racks. Makes about two dozen cookies.
